

REP. LEEPER: BRINGING BACK CONNECTICUT'S ECONOMY

While our community has faced unimaginable hardships this year, we are seeing brighter days ahead. I am thrilled to have worked with legislators to ensure the biennium budget does not raise taxes. Connecticut's current fiscal outlook is better than it has been in decades. The state currently has an $828 million budget surplus, a historically high rainy day fund at $3.5 billion, a credit rating that has been upgraded by four separate rating agencies this past year, and we were able to make an unanticipated additional $1.26 billion payment toward the long-standing unfunded pension liabilities.

In recognition of the disproportionate impact of the pandemic on Connecticut's working families, we have taken vital steps to ease the financial burden on the middle class. I'm proud to have advocated for initiatives such as the earned income tax credit and the child tax credit to ensure an equitable recovery.
